THE IMPORTANCE OF SOMI'S WORK

The digital world is a minefield of data retrieval with an urgent need for privacy protection

The 21st century has brought us an unprecedented digital revolution, but also a downside: our personal data has become the target of companies that make a lot of money from it.

Our personal data, once cherished as private property, has been transformed into a valuable commodity in a billion-dollar industry.

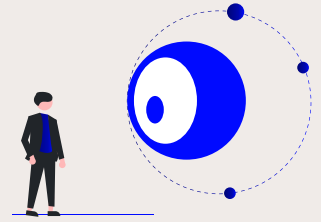

Tech giants and shadowy data brokers collect, analyze, and sell our digital footprint on a scale that defies our imagination. Every click, every search, every like - nothing escapes their all-seeing eye.

Even our most personal preferences and thoughts are analyzed and exploited for commercial gain.

Although the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) was an important step, it is clear that more is needed to protect our digital privacy.

Large companies regularly violate the law and misuse our data.

It is time to tighten the reins and ensure that the GDPR actually provides the protection it promises.

THE STEPS TOWARDS DATA AUTONOMY

Preserving our privacy and data autonomy in these challenging times requires a multi-faceted approach:

Awareness: We must become aware of the value of our data and the risks of careless sharing.

Digital security: Taking practical steps to protect our online privacy, such as using strong passwords, encryption, and privacy-friendly tools.

Legal action: Enforcing our rights under the GDPR and holding companies that violate our privacy accountable.

Collective action: Joining forces to stand up against the powerful tech companies.

THE FIGHT FOR A SAFE DIGITAL FUTURE

In this complex landscape, Stichting Onderzoek Marktinformatie (SOMI) is a beacon of hope. As a non-profit organization with European recognition for conducting collective actions, we are determined to protect the privacy rights of European citizens.

Our dedicated team of legal experts is ready to take on tech giants that violate our privacy. We demand compensation for victims of data abuse and strive for a fairer and more transparent digital landscape. We have already taken important steps in our fight, including gaining recognition in court as a representative collective claim organization, paving the way for justice.
